"My policy has been, and will continue to be while I have the honor to remain in the administration to maintain friendly terms with, but to be independent of, all nations of the earth; to share in the broils of none; to fulfill our own engagements; to supply wants and be carriers for them all; being thoroughly convinced that it is our policy and interest to do so." ---Washington's Letter to Morris, December, 1795.

WORLD COURT MENACE HIT BY PASTOR-SOLON WHO URGES PROTESTS

By BERT FORD

The Rev. Roland D. Sawyer of Ware today struck a major note in the swelling chorus of opposition to entry of the United States in the World Court.

"When a nation's life is threatened, all political differences, all special lines, every domestic difference must be subordinated to the national defense," he wrote in a letter of protest sent to the Boston Evening American.

The Rev. Mr. Sawyer advocates mass meetings of protest throughout the State in order that the people may be given a chance to voice their opposition to a plan that he considers strikes at the vitals of our national life.

Miss Kinney, an attractive brunette of 19, met Stribling in their class room at Lester High School just as he began to obtain recognition as a boxer of standing. She is the granddaughter of Judge Robert Guerry, one time president of Wesleyan College and nominee for governor of Georgia. Her father is a wealthy cotton broker.

3,500 CLIENTS FACE THREE MILLION LOSS BY DOW & CO. FAILURE

A loss of $3,000,000 or more must be stood by the 3,500 creditors of the defunct brokerage house of C. P. Dow and Company, formerly of No. 10 State street, according to a statement filed in Federal Court today for Charles F. Dow and Guy B. Howe, partners, in a settlement offer.

In the statement, issued by Attorney Martin Witte representing the bankrupt estate, it is estimated the liabilities amount to $3,500,000 and the assets $1,100,000 cash and some minor items.

Of the assets, $400,000 must be paid to satisfy secured creditors, which includes the total amount to be divided among the open account holders to $700,000, leaving net liabilities close to $2,500,000.

Witte's statement figures all open account holders can be paid 18.3 per cent, the basis of the settlement offer filed today.

The statement reads in part: "All present obligations of each partner will be paid in full. All priorities, such as the court may allow will be paid in full. All open accounts will be paid at the rate of 18.3 per cent."

"The firm's liabilities are $3,500,000, arrived at by deducting withdrawals from the totals of all margin deposits. The net assets in cash are about $1,100,000."

"On the basis of these figures the firm would ordinarily be able and happy to pay a greater dividend to unsecured creditors but the law requires that certain creditors be paid in full, mostly because their securities were in whole or in part in the receiver's actual possession."

be added. "It is well that a great meeting be held in Boston, and that similar meetings take place throughout the State."

As a member of the House of Representatives for the past twelve years, Mr. Sawyer, a Congressional minister and a student of social, political and economic life of the country, is peculiarly fitted to sense the danger of any such alliance.

He is able to analyze the proposal from the dual perspective of statesman and a minister of the gospel. He stresses the importance of a problem that he termed the "new danger." Lodge and Senator Moses of New Hampshire to join forces with "such radicals as La Follette, Borah and Johnson, and build up that special defense of America which was not kept up from being submerged in the European muddle."

He points out that the issue is "too big and too vital" to countenance silence.

"It is to be devoutly hoped that Butler and Gillett today will stand where Lodge and Walsh stand," says Representative Sawyer, "and if there is any doubt as to the position, the united voice of the Walsh Democrats and the Lodge Republicans should be raised in every city and town, that the voice of Massachusetts again ring true on a great international issue in Washington."

GOOD FELLOWS BRING CHRISTMAS HELP AND JOY TO BOSTON CHILDREN

These children are sure Santa Claus will come to you if you have faith. Good fellows provide in Charleston.

These kiddies in South Boston were happy by toys brought to them by a Boston Evening American Good Fellow.

Many mothers, like the South End woman, showered blessings on Good Fellows who made their children very happy Christmas.

JOY REACHES THOUSANDS BY GOOD FELLOWS

Spreading Christmas cheer among thousands of Boston kiddies in the tenement districts, the Royal and Ancient Order of Good Fellows distributed hundreds of baskets, brimming full of food, toys and goodies as the result of gifts of both children and grown-ups received by the Boston Evening American.

The recipients of this Santa were almost as numerous as the food. But their mother's spirit, burning on of old in the hearts of Members of this Grand and Glorious Order, went marching on and on, until every last kiddie's appeal had been answered.

Looking lonely and wistfully up at the Good Fellow title, the boys and girls of South Boston, and the growing well-worth of what was left of the old-fashioned "Wish List" book, and the old-fashioned "Wish List" book, and the old-fashioned "Wish List" book.

THREE SHOT DEAD WHEN THUGS INVADE DANCE

New York, Dec. 25.—Blood-gang warfare flared up in a tawdry house in a South Bronx hall cabaret early today, leaving three dead men in its wake, one of them was "Big Red" Dick Johnson, gunman and leader of what was left of the notorious "Wild Man" crew, and the other two, Neil J. Perry and Aaron H. Smith, both of Brooklyn.

The father, a disabled veteran of the World War, is now in a Government mental hospital as the result of being shot. Edward Allen and William of Brooklyn, also wounded, are being treated at the same hospital.

Many little tots to whom Santa was fast becoming a myth, a heart-headed old gentleman inhabiting the coldest spot in the Polar region, now believe he is a real, a kind, a wonderful old man, with his quarters in the big heart of Boston Good Fellow.

With the help of New England's sleazebag, the Good Fellows were working, carrying, gladdening the hearts of all by tearing aside the veil of poverty and raising enlightened even-minded class distinctions, these representatives of Kris Kringle himself, do good will as well as to the toys and candy, food and donations.

Continuing their happy task into the wee hours of evening, they explored the spirit and music of the Bethlehem Babe. For all of the kiddies were made happy. Christmas boxes, was given the Good Fellows by the Prime Furniture Company. The kiddies got it.

R. D. Sawyer Assails World Court Plan

EDITOR of the Boston Evening American:

When a nation's life is threatened all political differences, all social lines, every domestic difference, must be subordinated to the national defense. This position can not be denied, either as an ethical duty or political wisdom.

And it is equally true, that when international peace would be its propaganda seek to divert a great nation from its true policy, and turn the national ship of state into new and untold seas, every patriotic citizen should forget party politics or leadership, and allied together, citizens of all parties, rally to the historic policy which has made his nation great.

America is today in this position. International finance that it may get its pound of flesh from every nation, seeks to build up a great international tribunal, confident of controlling that tribunal.

To succeed in this it is absolutely essential that America surrender its historic American policy of national independence, and become involved in the European machine, where its great wealth and power may be used, as we, made the goat, shall man the ship and pay the bills.

The most reassuring sight in American national life for a generation was seen when such ultra-conservatives as the late Senator Lodge, and Senator Moses of New Hampshire, joined hands with such radicals as La Follette, Borah and Johnson, and built up that splendid defense of America, which won and kept us from being embroiled in the European muddle. It is devoutly to be hoped that Butler and Gillett today will stand where Lodge and Walsh then stood.

And if there be any doubt as to their position, the united voice of the Walsh Democrats and Lodge Republicans should be raised in every city and town, that the voice of Massachusetts again ring true on a great international issue at Washington. To make sure there be no doubt as to where Massachusetts stands it is well that a great meeting be held in Boston, and that similar meetings be held throughout the State.

The issue is too big, too vital, for anything to be allowed to keep us silent. There is not a Democrat in the State who thought Walsh was right who would today pronounce him wrong by voting to enter the World Court. There can not be a Republican who thought the fine logic of Lodge was an error before who would now pronounce him wrong by supporting a senator who votes to enter the World Court.

SEAS POUND SHIP ASHORE ON CAPE

North cape, the schooner was found riding the waves, with only an improvised anchor preventing her being driven headlong before the wind, by a crew that heaved the turbulent sea to try to render aid.

Word was also flashed by radio to Ward's Hook and the coast cutter, Ansonnet, was despatched from there by Captain Breckwith. The first rescue party of the coast-guardmen was unsuccessful, but they learned that only a captain and two men were aboard the Mary Langdon, and when the wind abated a little they returned a second time and put nine men aboard, under orders from their captain, Anton Travers, to await the arrival of the cutter.

The schooner's skeleton crew, fighting the gale all night, had succeeded in temporarily saving her and themselves by fixating an anchor out of discarded anchor-chains, after two anchors had been torn loose by the storm.

The Mary Langdon is a one-time run-runner, having been captured in Vineyard Sound last June with a cargo of 1,000 cases of liquor hidden beneath a deck cargo of lumber. At that time it was the Ansonnet which chased and overtook her, forcing her seizure.

She was later sold at auction by order of the Federal Court.

While Boston shivered today in the cold snap which swept out of the Northwest, the thermometer predicted that the thermometer would reach a new low mark for the season by night.

The entire West and Middle West was caught in the cold wave which followed in the wake of fair Christmas weather.

In contrast to the frigid temperatures east of the Rocky Mountains the West Coast is enjoying unusually mild weather. At Denver, this morning, the mercury registered as above. Mild weather is reported as general as far east as the Rocky Mountain section.

Upper New York State has a foot or more of real snow. The lowest temperature in New England was recorded at Northfield, N. H., where the mercury slumped to 2 below the zero mark.

Middlesex County felt the brunt of the cold wave. Mercury readings there range from 2 in Burlington to 14 at Concord, 8 at Lincoln and Lexington and 10 at Bedford.

A two-inch snowfall which preceded the cold snap in Middlesex is the first snowfall of the year today.

After an hour's rest it was about to fly aboard, but was held before the mast. "A. J. J. 31 L. 22, 12, 1886," had been noted.

STRAUSS BACKS WISE IN PRAISE OF CHRIST

—By Arthur Brisbane

NEW YORK, Dec. 26 (A.P.)—Jews throughout the country are flocking to the support of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, under fire from Orthodox rabbis for praising Jesus. The executive committee of the United Palestine appeal, raising a $5,000,000 fund, today had under consideration Dr. Wise's resignation as chairman. Among those protesting its acceptance were Nathan Strauss, who sent the fund a pledge of $100,000 after having already given $500,000; Rabbi Sidney Teichman, in New Haven; Rabbi Samuel Gup in Providence; Rabbi Samuel Brown in Newark and the Jewish ministers of Northridge, California.

Rabbi Samuel Hirschberg of Milwaukee, in a sermon before his congregation, summarized his views with the statement: "A Jew, then, Jesus was—a Jew of his time and not a Jew of the future."

Rabbi Hirschberg asserted that Jesus preached a message, that he was a faithful commentator of the synagogue, that he preached as a Jew, that he recited the doctrine of the Jews, that he regarded himself as a Jew and wanted to be regarded as nothing but a Jew, and that he did not wish to be regarded or worshipped as a God.

"I have no doubts of the historic reality of such a personage as Jesus," said Rabbi Hirschberg.

Tom Kenney of the Huntington School swimming team. There are a lot of clever swimmers at this school. They are coached by Win Merling. The team practices at the "Y" tank.

Also Welsh of the Boston University track team, snapped going over a hurdle.

Jim Wyszynski of South Boston High School. He is center ice on the hockey team. Jim is shown facing off just before a hot season on the rink. South Boston High is showing some classy work in the Saturday morning games at the Arena.

Ed McGrath of Brookline High. Many experts claim that the best sprinter in a long time is here. He will be burning the boards in Maclean's Building soon.

Robert McCormick of the Boston Trade School, one of the clever goalies among the youngsters. He stops everything but the Empire State Express if it comes his way.

Helen Exames (at left), a Boston miss, who gets recreation from bowling. When Helen rolls 'em down the alley, the pins fly right and left.

St. Vitus would have made a good soccer player. Here is a shot at the Hub-City Street clash. Something doing every minute for 90 minutes in a soccer game.

SPORT EDITORIAL

THE Old Grads are being heard from. Charles H. L. Johnston, Harvard '89, now resident in Washington, has the courage to write and the Harvard Crimson, sponsor of effete football, has the courage to print, the appending letter. In our view, Mr. Johnston has said a fountain pen full. To the Editor of the Crimson:

The Harvard graduates of this city have been disgusted with the editorials which have been emanating from your paper, and as a loyal Harvard graduate and a football player I have to spend half of my time in explaining to the graduates of Princeton, Yale, Dartmouth, Illinois, and Pennsylvania, to say nothing of Georgetown, why Harvard cannot even defeat Holy Cross at the manly, popular game of football.

My eye fell upon an editorial in a magazine, and in view of the fact that this is the kind of an editorial which you should print, instead of the sappy, weak-kneed stuff which filters into our papers, quoted from the Harvard Crimson. I thought that I would send it to you, trusting that when the College is down, you will stimulate the Spartan spirit to rise up again, and be—as of yore—leader in the great American sport of football.

But you can bet THEIR daughters... My eye fell upon an editorial in a magazine, and in view of the fact that this is the kind of an editorial which you should print, instead of the sappy, weak-kneed stuff which filters into our papers, quoted from the Harvard Crimson. I thought that I would send it to you, trusting that when the College is down, you will stimulate the Spartan spirit to rise up again, and be—as of yore—leader in the great American sport of football.

Surprise and sense are great things. Sports have made men... My eye fell upon an editorial in a magazine, and in view of the fact that this is the kind of an editorial which you should print, instead of the sappy, weak-kneed stuff which filters into our papers, quoted from the Harvard Crimson. I thought that I would send it to you, trusting that when the College is down, you will stimulate the Spartan spirit to rise up again, and be—as of yore—leader in the great American sport of football.

A HINT FOR THE BICYCLE... DAILY SHORT STORY

TINY'S CHRISTMAS

By Florence McIntyre

THE WEEK BEFORE CHRISTMAS, Sister Felicia had just finished writing the new year's resolutions. She was sitting at her desk, looking at the list. She had written: "To be a better mother," "To be a better sister," "To be a better friend," "To be a better person." She had written these resolutions for herself, but she had also written them for her children. She had written: "To be a better mother," "To be a better sister," "To be a better friend," "To be a better person." She had written these resolutions for herself, but she had also written them for her children.

It was a cold, clear day, and the snow was falling fast. Sister Felicia was sitting in her room, looking out the window. She was thinking about the children. She was thinking about how much she loved them. She was thinking about how much she wanted to be a better mother. She was thinking about how much she wanted to be a better sister. She was thinking about how much she wanted to be a better friend. She was thinking about how much she wanted to be a better person.

A Federated Boston

41 Greater Boston Cities and Towns Should Unite

Municipal Boston shows a population of 780,000. GREATER Boston—which includes the communities within fifteen miles of the City Hall—numbers over 1,800,000.

The three immediate predecessors of Mayor-elect Nichols, Fitzgerald, Peters and Curley, have advocated some form of Greater Boston.

As Mayor of Boston Mr. Nichols will find a notable place in history if, through his appeal to and influence upon Public Sentiment, the federation of the cities and towns that make up Greater Boston becomes by legislative act a fact during his administration. A campaign of education to that end cannot commence too soon.

The life of these forty-one cities and towns is closely interwoven with the life of Boston—in business, in finance, in recreation, in GOVERNMENT.

Take the traffic problem. Congestion in the centre of the city is due largely to the increase of trade pouring in from Greater Boston. And congestion is increasing. More traffic means more traffic policemen and more wide streets. Somebody must pay the increase. Should the 780,000 pay for what the 1,800,000 uses? This is no light chatter. The problem, immediate and pressing, is facing us in the demand for a Loop Highway.

Take taxes. In no two of these outlying districts are the taxes the same, because the cost of administration differs so widely in various localities under the present system. High valuations, low taxes—low values, high taxes—what suburbanite home hunter is not familiar with the doleful pass-words?

We impute no inefficiency to the local town governments. Were they the very acme of efficiency, they could not run their small houses so economically as they could if they combined together, and knocked down needless partitions, and combined together to build a big house.

It would involve not a saving in overhead and taxes alone. It would involve added comfort to Mr. Citizen and nearly two million of his colleagues. Money saved is money earned, but that is not the only way that a Federated Boston would put more money in the pockets of the citizens of Greater Boston. Under this scheme a policy of expansion would go hand in hand with a policy of co-ordination.

One type of Metropolitan administration has been successfully in operation since the Legislature created a Metropolitan Park District of thirty-six cities and towns outside of Boston. But a Metropolitan Park system is just one small step.

What would come under the advisory supervision of the Federation? The Departments of Fire, Police, Flying Fields, Taxation, Education, Public Health, Public Works, and Citizenship.

The first step? The Legislature's authorization of a Commission appointed by the Governor to investigate plans for a Federated Boston.

Here is a subject of vital importance to the future of the Boston neighborhoods. Boston Evening American readers will hear more of it.

Lynn

"There May Be Too Many Shoe Shops, but NOT HERE!"

The Christmas-tree get-together of James M. Daly, Jacob Stern and their associates in the co-operative Golden Rule Shoe venture at Lynn may be taken as symbolic of the new confidence that has come to that industrial centre, and not alone to the men and women of the shoe factories but to all others who help to make the city one of America's busiest bee-hives.

There are 1,870 boot and shoe factories in the United States, and 227 of them are producing 65 per cent. of America's shoes, but Lynn isn't "scarce".

There ARE too many shoe-factories—the busiest 227 shops could turn out 95 per cent. of our shoes—but plucky Lynn's position is that the surplus shops are somewhere else; Lynn is after MORE.

Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-Five has been a good year to Lynn; 1926 will be a better one.

The Chamber of Commerce is wide-awake; witness the new industries that have come to town, giving employment to 1,200 persons; observe the increase in savings-bank accounts; consider the reports of tradesmen, that really "bad" accounts are as scarce as hens' teeth; that find a vacant store, in the retail district.

No other shoe centre will send to the 15th annual convention and style-show of the National Shoe Retailers' Association, in Chicago next month, a better equipped or more confident body of salesmen than those who go out from Lynn. The home town will be rooting for them. Studying the figures which reveal the number of shops which CAN make shoes, the number of manufacturers who WANT to make them, the people of Lynn appreciate the keenness of the competition their manufacturers must meet. They understand, too, that production, distribution and selling costs are among the important factors which decide where new orders go.

Last year and the year before, doleful years in the leather industry, Lynn lost 30 shoe factories, of varying degrees of importance. THIS year, besides taking on NEW industries—candies, dyes, auto-springs, wallboard and others—the city has added MORE than 30 units to its list of shoe shops! Satisfied?

By no means; the Chamber of Commerce will spend $10,000 this year to further diversify the industrial life of the city.

THAT'S Lynn, and may twenty other New England towns be similarly blessed with civic organizations abounding in pep, ginger, local pride and all the other qualities that help to keep the wheels turning and the pay-envelope coming!

So That's How It Started

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

A NEW YORK column that has taken for him is making a lot of money routing evening clothes to semibarbarians.

SOME men want to be dressed smartly even while walking in their sleep.

ONE man does so much strolling at night that he wears swallowtail pajamas.

HE won't sleep in anything but stiff-bottom night shirts.

HE goes to bed in a tuxedo and wakes up in a Pinaud Albert.

HE changes his clothes in the middle of the night.

HE mixes a valet who has in session.

THREE or four valets in his closet who sleep with his hat on.

HE won't even take his shoes off when he goes to bed.

THE head of acquiesce says that a well-dressed man should never go walking in his bare feet.

THE man lies down with his gloves to one hand and his cane in the other.

HE is fond of walking that he wears a cane.

HE is fond of walking that he wears a cane.

HE is fond of walking that he wears a cane.

HE is fond of walking that he wears a cane.

HE is fond of walking that he wears a cane.

HE is fond of walking that he wears a cane.

HE is fond of walking that he wears a cane.

HE is fond of walking that he wears a cane.

HE is fond of walking that he wears a cane.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

"HOSOR all men!"—I Peter, TAD.

We speak much of the beauty and mystery of Love.

Yet in the name of Love we do most abominable things to each other.

To most of us Love means passion and domination. And so we think that we have the right to restrain and oppress, nag and induce, heckle and interfere with the loved one.

There is no more vicious form of violation and tyranny than the thing we usually call Love. As a matter of fact, it has no relationship to true love. It is really a feverish desire to gratify and extend our own lives. That other personality is simply a food which our own egotism feasts.

We all have been misled by the so-called love. It has revealed to us all and led us all. Yet there is still a hunger within us that seeks to establish an intimate spiritual bond with our fellow man.

As we try to build walls on Love and again we are disappointed.

We are disappointed because we are reaching out for the wrong thing and giving the wrong thing to our fellow man.

We think our deepest need is for love, but it isn't.

There is something within each one of us which is deeper and grander than the affection, something which forces the foundation recognition of that Pride in other words, respect.

In Jacob Wassermann's book "Faber" this passage comes:

"I am confident that if you dig far enough into a human being you will discover his deep and powerful need to be respected. It is deeper and stronger than that of love. If men would respect each other freely there would not be a hundredth part of the suffering which is now brought down by Love."

Sometimes I think that pride is the one infallible sign of Godliness within us.

Famous Fortunes

By BARBARA BAYNE

FROM cook's boy to a remote Canadian lumber camp to ownership of two great steamship lines and a vast timber business is a long step. But the goal was not achieved at a single stride. There was plenty of rough going—some places had to be negotiated by a canoe, others by a horse, before the lad with the mental job became the lumber and shipping giant of California and the world in general.

Robert Dollar was born in humble circumstances nearly eighty years ago in Northern Scotland. When his family emigrated to Ottawa, though under fourteen, he was sent to a lumber camp ten miles beyond the last outpost of civilization.

Surrounded as he was by rough lumberjacks, there was that within the lad which rendered him impervious to their influence. Thirsting for knowledge, every spare moment found him with a pencil and paper or a book.

Before he was twelve he had successfully managed a "strike" of saw logs over the Chaudiere Falls, for which he was made "foreman" over a big gang of men. He invested his savings in a small lumber tract, but the flogging effect of Wall Street's memorable "Black Friday" closed him out.

His first ship—a little 50-ton tug—was the nucleus of the Robert Dollar Steamship Company, with one fleet plying between Alaska and the Pacific Coast and another between the Pacific Coast and the Orient.

Robert Dollar has been the greatest individual creator of commerce between the United States and the Orient.

"You Said It, Marceline!"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "MARRIAGE TANGLES"

SOME PEOPLE think MARRIAGE is a KNOT. BUT OTHERS it is merely A TANGLE.

IN TWO PEOPLE Get MIXED UP AND LOSE their HEADS. Or their HEARTS.

Of course, AFTER the HONEYMOON, the man who Lost his head never FINDS it. THEN THE GIRL Who lost HER HEART demands it BACK-AGAIN.

When a woman STARTS DEMANDING HER HEART

Back, it simply means the MAN has not TAKEN CARE of it and the Poor thing has got LOST. In THIS case she may Sometimes STRAY To find and and UP PROBABLY pick UP ANOTHER instead.

This means MORE TROUBLE. For the way to GET OUT OF A TANGLE is not To GET INTO an entanglement. HEARTS ARE little things. And WISE people hang on To their OWN.

HOW BEST TO MAKE AN IMPRESSION

By DR. FRANK CRANE

B. C. FORBES suggested recently as a business tip: "Be more willing to let the other fellow make an impression on you than anxious to make an impression upon him."

This is a good rule to adopt in all our relations with our fellows.

Every man is vain and likes to hear himself talk. No man likes to have another man do his thinking for him or to come to his conclusions for him.

It is much better to leave a man alone and let him come to his conclusions by the processes of his own reasoning than it is to talk too much.

A glib salesman who is over-eloquent often defeats his own ends. And a good listener usually is a good salesman.

There is more power in a suggestion than in an argument. And the salesman who is successful is one who is a successful stealer of another and not one who undertakes to force the conclusions of another.

The more pressure you bring to bear upon the man the more you arouse his stubbornness and opposition. And the more you let him run on in his own way and steer him a bit the more likely he is to come to your conclusion.

Mr. Forbes says in describing his interview with someone he wished to influence:

"There were at least three times during his conversation that I felt like interrupting him by saying that I knew all about what he was going to tell me. But did I once but? My mission was not to impress upon him my own well-informed man I was, but to get him in a friendly frame of mind and thus disposed to do what I wanted him to do."

"We are a vain lot, we humans. We may hate to admit it, but the deep truth is that we like the people who make us feel in love with ourselves."

This is a good point for us all to remember. It is pretty hard sometimes to repress our ego, but it is a good business policy not to be too vain.

IS ENTIRE UNIVERSE SELF-RENEWING?

By Garrett P. Servis

Notes Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

ALTHOUGH Sir Oliver Lodge's confession of faith as an spiritualist has attracted his authority among those who have been speculative inclined, yet his imaginative flights always borne upon more or less scientific-looking wings, continue to attract universal attention. The latest of these is of innocently vast sweep, comprehending all space and all time.

Delivering the annual "Huxley lecture" in London the other night, Sir Oliver took for his subject a question that has tormented the human mind since the days of the first philosopher, viz: the origin and the end of the universe, or cosmic evolution. Will things in general come to an end, or will they ever have a beginning? Does everything recur in endless cycles, so that while there is constant change there is never a final termination?

Lodge's Idea

Lodge's idea is basically the same, but he has used more recent discoveries and theories to prop it up. He speaks of one of the beginnings of the universe as having occurred "two hundred million years ago" by the formation of nebulae. Of course, there is nothing certain or definite about such figures. They are not astronomical but of speculative origin.

For some time past geologists and astronomers have been extending their estimates of the length of past time in order to suit the exigencies of growing theories. When a good, irrefragable theory for eternity. This is shown by the popularity of a theory that represent the universe as self-renewing, and consequently everlasting.

When Lodge proved mathematically the stability of the solar system, in spite of all the perturbations to which the motions of the planets were subjected through their mutual attractions, he pleased not only the savants, but the people. It was, in its nature, a popular conclusion, in accordance with the opinion of current human thought.

The scientific assurance that this system of worlds in which we live is carried on needs of self-destruction, gave a great deal of satisfaction, and the assurance with which it is taken up and utilized by religious teachers as evidence of the providence of God, how well it is accorded with the general trend.

Modern discovery has enormously expanded the field, but has not slightly changed the character of it.

Approach our last would seem to have been cast upon the middle of our three trillion-year cycles, that we can look upon its development with equanimity.

DON'T VENT YOUR ANGER ON THE HOME FOLKS

In going home from the shop or the office you have been jostled in crowded cars or some autoist has bumped your automobile or you have been held up by Jews at the cross streets and when you reach your door you are in a fighting mood.

Notwithstanding that your family has had nothing to do with your chastening experience, you vent your anger on the home folk.

In this square thing to do? Why make the whole family unhappy just because others have caused you to be upset?

It has become a general experience that the persons in the hurry-rush of rush periods show no interest or consideration for anything but themselves.

But it is different with you in your home. You must not take the good cheer and the happiness out of your family just because you have had to encounter maddening crowds in reach.

Don't let the actions of others destroy the joy which should exist in your home circle.
